UNIVERSITY RELATIONS

Rights, Ethics, and Medicine, the spring series of free public lectures on human values in a changing society begins February 19 at the University of Dayton. Distinguished speakers for the spring series include:

Henry K. Beecher, M.D., Professor Emeritus of Harvard's Medical School, and Senior member of the AMA, will address the ethics of experimentation on human subjects and the right to be left alone.

Praphulla K. Bajpai, Ph.D., Professor of Biology at the University of Dayton will address some of the pharmacological effects of a policy of free use of artificial contraceptives.

Judith P. Swazey, Ph.D., in the Department of Socio-Medical Studies at Boston University's School of Medicine and Fellow of the Hastings Center, will discuss the use of psycho-surgery as it relates to children and persons confined to penal and mental institutions.

K. Danner Clouser, of the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center of Penn State University, will address some of the uses, abuses and limits of medical ethics.

John F. Quinn, a philosopher of law at the University of Dayton, will examine the topic of insanity as it relates to criminal law and civil law.

Raymond Herbenick, Ph.D., chairman of Philosophy at the University of Dayton will review some of the controversial ethical and legal issues of abortion since the U.S. Supreme Court decisions of 1973.

Rev. Albert Moraczewski, O.P., President, Pope John XXIII Medical-Moral Research and Education Center (St. Louis), will speak on ethical problems related to drugs - prescription and self-administered.

You are cordially invited to participate in the spring series which is sponsored by the Ohio Program in the Humanities, a state-based program of the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Philosophy Department at the University of Dayton. For additional press information call 513-229-2911.
